

Dr. Sunita Maheshwari, awarded 2014's 'Amazing Indian' by Times Now, is a Yale trained Pediatric Cardiologist who was nominated one of the Top 20 women achievers in medicine in India in 2009 and in the list of 50 most powerful women in India in 2016.

She is also the Chief Dreamer at Teleradiology Solutions (India's first and largest teleradiology company that has provided over 4 million diagnostic reports to patients and hospitals globally) apart from incubating other start up companies in the tele-health space and co-running a trust fund-the Telrad Foundation that provides teleradiology and telemedicine services to poor areas in Asia that do not have access to high quality medical care.

She currently runs the first of its kind e-teaching program, accredited by the National Board in Delhi, for postgraduates in Pediatric Cardiology all across India. She is also an inspirational speaker having given over 200 lectures, including several TEDx talks.
